It is a humorous story told from the cockroach's point of view. Did you laugh? I did.

Materials

Pencils and sheets of paper

Activities

1. On a piece of paper design, draw and colour your best birthday cake ever. Don't forget the candles!

You may even try to make something fun to eat. Ask an adult first.

2. Fold a blank page into 3 rectangles.

The cockroach in the story did not have good birthday party manners! Write down a list of good manners you could show at a birthday party.

Write at the top of each rectangle

Start.... Now write down some good manners you show when you arrive at a party

During..... write down good manners you can show while you are at the party

End..... and now write down good manners you can show when you leave the party

3. On a piece of paper plan your own birthday party games.

Write down 3 games you would love to play at your birthday party. Draw a picture of you and your party guests playing one of these games.

Can you write down some super sentences about your favourite game?

For example

My favourite party game is musical chairs. I love dancing to the music and quickly racing to the nearest chair when the music stops. Laughter and noise means we are all having fun!

Read your sentences to an adult.

Please remember you do not have to do every activity.
